

LUCA ANTONAZZO, Cardiff University - School of Social Sciences

Luca Antonazzo is a Research Associate at Cardiff University. His main areas of interest fall within the scope of sociology of work and organizations. He is generally interested in social resilience and how social systems adapt and respond to change. In particular, he is currently concerned with how exogenous pressures (such as technological innovation, global market competition, environmental constraints) influence the patterns of transformation of labour markets and future work, as well as the implications for skills development.